Evening in Moonlight Meadow

Barnaby Bunny sat in Moonlight Meadow. The sun was going down. Pink and orange colours filled the sky. Soon, the first tiny stars twinkled. Barnaby's sleepy eyes looked up. He loved how the night began. He felt a soft, happy feeling inside.

Many Twinkling Lights

Darkness came. Many more stars popped out. The sky looked like a dark blanket. It had shiny, tiny lights. Barnaby wanted to see every single one. He found a cozy spot. It was under a big, friendly bush. He lay down on the soft grass.

A Big, Starry Sky

"So many stars!" Barnaby said softly. His eyes felt a little tired. He wanted to enjoy them all. But the sky was very, very big. He closed his eyes for a moment. He remembered a special trick. It helped him feel calm and quiet.

Taking Calm Breaths

Barnaby took a deep, slow breath. He held it, then let it out slowly. He did it again. In, and out. "One star at a time," he thought. He found a bright star. He watched it twinkle. Then he moved to the next one. He felt peace grow inside him.

Sweet Dreams Begin

Barnaby smiled. He felt warm and calm. The stars looked like little friends. They shone just for him. He gave a gentle yawn. "Sweet dreams begin with a smile!" he whispered. He closed his sleepy eyes, ready for a cozy night.
